Interactive Notebook Grading Rubrics

After using Interactive Notebooks in my class since 2009, I decided that last year (August 2012) that I needed to make a more formal approach in the grading of the notebooks.

Since my view on notebooks is that they are a resource to aide in learning just as a textbook or manual would, it is crucial that I choose items to grade that are known to students ahead of time.

Since I started grading with the following rubric (revised July 2013) I have noticed that students are taking an interest in keeping their notebooks in the best shape that they can be in and truly using them for their intended purpose.

I hope that you enjoy the use of these rubrics in your classroom as well.
